LEAGUE LOGICAL SAYS DEMOCRATIC SENATOR

Declares Opponents Wage Campaign of Flimsy Misrepresentation Regarding the Covenant.

ANSWERS SENATOR SHERMAN

Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, Replies Directly to Constitutional Objections Raised by Illinoisian. New Methods Needs He Asserts.

WASHINGTON, May 28 .- The league f nations was supported as a logical and practical organism, entirely consistent with the American Constituby Senator Robinson, Democrat, of Arkansas, in a speech today in the Opponents of the league, the Senator charges, are making a campaign of misrepresentation, setting up flimsy objections that the proposal violates American traditions. The covenant, he esserted, in no way impairs national sovereignty or subverts American constitutional principles.

Many Treaties Similar Before.

"A treaty is not unconstitutinal," he asserted, "merely because it contains agreements, the execution of which requires the exercise of powers vested by the Constitution exclusively in the executive and degislative branches of the government. To declare that no treaty can be made which requires legislative action to execute it, or which pledges the government to do something exclusively within the power of the executive branches would nullify a large majority of the treaties heretofore entered into by the United States and render the government powerless to maintain foreign relations.

"The United States has already as a large of the week, and the formal welcome by the city will take place next."

welcome to Eightieth Division.
The greater part of the Eightieth States and render the government powerless to maintain foreign relations.
The United States has already entered into many treaties pledging itself not to engage in war against certain foreign nations until the expiration of a definite period, and it has also agreed by treaty to settle many disputes by arbitration. Notwithstanding such agreements. Congress still has the power to declare war.

"With respect to the allegation that the mandatory provision is in conflet with the Constitution, the only question of a constitutional nature arising is whether the United States is forbidden to govern or assist in the government of other countires. There is no question under the revised draft of compelling the United States to act as a mandate. The language clearly and Appears makes it optional.

Moral Aspect of Agreement.

Moral Aspect of Agreement.

Moral Aspect of Agreement.

'The declaration often made that Article X. authorized the executive council to involve the world in war in its execution is absurd. The language of the article is in case of any such aggression, or in case of any threat, or danger of such aggression, the executive council shall advise upon the means by which the obligation shall he fulfilled. It is perfectly clear that the executive council can compel no action under this article. The use of the word advise defeats such a construction."

the league were attempting to make the treaty a partisan issue, Mr. Rob-inson charged Republican Senate Leader Lodge with "ridiculous incon-sistency."

Old Methods Unreliable. Turning to the moral aspect of the eague agreement, the Arkansas Sena-or continued:

league agreement, the Arkansas Senator continued:

"Our obligation to co-operate in the discharge of the responsibilities resulting from victory are as undeniable as our privilege to enjoy the fruits of triumph. It would be cowardly, unthinkable, for example, to leave Poland, Serbla, Ukraine and Jugo-Slavia to the mercy of the central empires should they be rehabilitated, or to abandon to anarchy the colonies and territories separated by the war from the central empires.

"It is senseless to imagine that we have reached free gd of international disputes, even among those who now comprise our alifies. It is equally senseless to rely upon the old haphazard pre-war method of settling these disputes. That the proposed league of nations would make wars improbable seems to me conclusive. By the climination of secreey in treatles.

Answers Reed's Argument.

Senator Robinson took up in detail the constitutional objections to the league covenant quoting pretedents to show that the covenant provisions in many particulars follow the same legal lines as treaties now in force. In replying to Senator Reed's argument that the league would give a majority voice in world affairs to the black, brown, red and yellow races, the Arkansas Senator declared that Reed had been blinded by prejudices. "There is no race question involved," continued Mr. Robinson. "Would the Senator favor a league composed of Answers Reed's Argument. continued Mr. Robinson. "Would the Senator favor a league composed of white nations alone and thus force creation of a league of nations com-posed of other races? The Senator's contention is totally unimportant when viewed in connection with the fact that decisions of the league must be unan-imous?"

mous."
Senator Reed, the speaker charged, had "sought to intimidate Senators from the South by injecting the race question" into the league debate and question" into the league debate and had "challenged" Southern supporters of the league to justify themselves before their constituency.

"I accept the challenge," said Senator Robinson. "The day the Senator leaves Washington to go to Missouri to justify himself before his constituents for his opposition to every effort for a league of nations, on that day I go to Arkansas to justify my support of this league. And if I don't get back before he does. I'll never come back, "If the people of Arkansas don't vote for the league two to one or more. I'll retire from the Senate."

"The objection that the league of nations treaty creates a supergovernment is without foundation," said Mr. Robinson. "It can take no action in any important controversy without the consent of the United States. Its powers are advisory. By the treaty it becomes the common agent of the signatory powers to promote international co-operation and peace. It is our agent, not our master."

Replying directly to the constitutional objections raised by Senator Sherman, Republican, of Illinois, and other league opponents, the Arkansas Senator said the same objections in plied with equal force to many treaties entered into by the nation in the part, and which had been found practical and beneficial. Railroad Administration Contemplates
No Raise to Meet Deficit—Conditions Highly Favorable.

WASHINGTON, May 28.—Highly favorable conditions and an outlook for excellent business were reported today by Director-General Hines, of the railroad administration, after an extensive trip through the West. He expressed a belief that the reconstructon process now under way would create a big industrial revival, because of the arrested demand for many products not produced during the war and large buying power of the public due to high wages and high prices for record farm crops.

Until the industrial situation is clarified, officials of the railroad administration do not expect to consider an increase in freight rates to compensate for the increasing deficit arising from reduced business after the armistice.

[Special to The Times-Dispatch.]
DANVILLE, VA., May 28.—The Danville Chamber of Commerce has taken steps to curb promiscuous appeals to the pupile, and yesterday a committee was appointed, its purpose being to pass upon all such appeals and to indorse or withhold indorsement, according to their merits. Today an agent was here from Richmond with a view to launching a campaign for the Childen's Home Society of Virginia, but it is understood that he was given little encouragement. Three local money campaigns are already in prospect for the near future, while the city has failed to reach its quota in the Salvation Army campaign just closing.
